

I cried the morning dew

The tears light yet heavy on my cheeks

The cool water flowed hot

For I had known sorrow

Yet my heart had not

Known

How deep the water flows

How heavy the fog becomes

My sisters danced like raindrops in a storm

Ever free

Yet the path determined

I cried in mourning you.