

I Hope This Made You Smile Today

by Brett Dyer

Today feels light, the breeze moves through the trees,

The sun is warm, but it does not burn skin.

I feel awake, supported, full of peace,

And let this gentle breath of joy begin.

Inspired to create without a wall,

No rules, no fear of what I'm meant to make.

I send out thoughts of love, both wide and small,

To mend the hearts that grief and worry shake.

To family, friends, and strangers passing by,

I look to love each thing that I can see—

In hopes the world might meet my open eye

And turn that tender gaze back onto me.

Though storms may come, I still look far ahead—

Today's a good day. That's enough to be said.